

A commemorative event to mark publication of the Commission report

Publication of your Commission report is an important moment for you and your family, and we will ensure that support is available to you before, during and after.

You may wish to mark publication of the report with a commemorative event. We will discuss your wishes before the report is finalised.

With your input, we can organise a private event on the day your report is published to:

- Commemorate your loved one.
- Recognise the contribution you and your family made throughout the investigative process.
- Reflect upon the findings in a supportive setting.

We will discuss the format of such an event with you, so that it is meaningful for you. The event can be formal or informal.

We could include the Chief

Commissioner presenting the findings or extracts from the report

You may wish to read your personal statement or parts of it, a poem, reflection or tribute, or have someone read these on your behalf

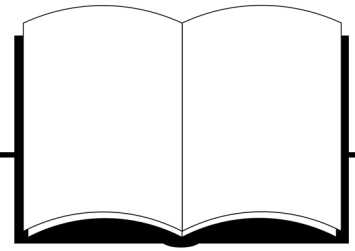

Less formally, it is possible for us to provide a meeting place for you and your family, where you can receive a final copy of the report and meet the Chief Commissioner.

We can display photographs or other appropriate items.

You can invite family members, your advocate or proxy and representatives of their organisation, or others who are important to you for the occasion. As with family meetings, you would provide a list of those attending in advance. You can also invite some Commission staff who assisted in the investigative process, should you wish.

We will agree the location of the event with you, from a list of hotels and other venues that have been assessed and approved by the Commission. There may be other venues that would like us to consider and risk assess and we will have a conversation with you about this

As the event is private, the media and public will not attend. Should you wish to speak to the media alongside the Commission, we can arrange for this to take place separately to the commemorative event, and provide support.
