

PRISONS AND PROBATION OMBUDSMAN TO CARRY OUT SPECIAL INVESTIGATION INTO ABUSE AT DETENTION CENTRE

24 October 2023 - Announced today, the Secretary of State for Justice has commissioned the Prisons and Probation Ombudsman (PPO) to carry out a special investigation into the abuse that took place at Medomsley Detention Centre between 1961 and 1987.

Medomsley Detention Centre was a facility that held boys and young men aged 17 – 21, some of whom have since reported being subjected to abuse while detained at the centre. Police investigations since the 1990's have led to the convictions of eight former members of staff.

Ombudsman Adrian Usher said: "The Secretary of State for Justice asked my office to carry out an independent investigation into what the Authorities¹ knew about the abuse that took place at Medomsley.

We will consider whether there were opportunities for the Authorities to have taken action or intervened at that time, and what actions (if any) they took in such instances."

The PPO has confirmed it will not re-investigate the facts of the abuse or individual incidents at Medomsley Detention Centre. The PPO is in the process of putting together a dedicated investigation team.

"This is an important investigation to understand how this large-scale abuse was able take place. We need to find out what the authorities knew and whether there were opportunities for them to have taken action at the time".

The Ombudsman's office will publish a formal written report of their findings.
